Recently, minimally invasive surgery has been applied for a variety of endocrine conditions. We have compared the results of minimally invasive surgery with conventional surgery in thyrotoxic patients. Medical records of thyrotoxic patients who underwent minimally invasive surgery (n = 25) and conventional surgery (n = 58) between 1998 and 2006 were reviewed. We compared preoperative, perioperative and postoperative outcomes of the two groups. Twenty-five patients underwent 25 operations using minimally invasive surgery. The average follow-up period was 31.3 ± 18.2 months. All operations were accomplished successfully without conversion to conventional surgery. During perioperative period, the two groups did not differ significantly with regard to hemoglobin (P = 0.648), INR (P = 0.119), fresh frozen plasma (P = 0.529), prothrombin time (P = 0.760) and partial thromboplastin time (P = 0.291). There was a statistically significant difference between two groups with regard to postoperative bleeding (P = 0.043) and hospital stay (P = 0.043).
